

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

For more information,
contact: Tara Solomon-Smith
Adult Development and Aging Agent, Wildcat Extension District
tsolomon@ksu.edu, 620-724-8233

Less Stress with Mindfulness

The average person has 50,000 thoughts running through their head each day! What a great reason to put some mindfulness into practice to ensure that our mind is not just full. Doing this can create relaxation, improve concentration, and increase energy!

There are seven principles of mindfulness:

- Non-judging—Be a neutral observer to each experience
- Patience—Allow each experience to emerge at its own pace
- Beginner’s mind—Avoid bringing in what you know to the current moment and try experiencing it as if it is the first time.
- Trust—Believe in your intuition and your ability to see things in a new way
- Non-striving—Avoid the need for winning or losing or striving for a purpose—it is about ‘being’ and ‘non-doing’
- Acceptance—See things as they are in the present moment
- Letting go—Take the time to detach from your usual feelings and thoughts

Today, let’s focus on how to create a mindful relationship with our ‘screens’. You have to unplug to connect! Spending too much staring at your screen and scrolling through social media can cause feelings of loneliness and self-loathing.

1. Turn your Smart Phone into an Ally

Our phones were created with tools to hook and distract. It takes an average of 20 minutes to return to your previous level of deep, productive focus. However, we can hack this! First, turn off your push notifications. Second, when you do need to take a break, make sure it is a deliberate one. Set an alarm to go off after a certain amount of work time and include a customized prompt to yourself to pause, breathe, stretch, go for a walk, feel gratitude—something that allows you to be intentional with your time, your health, and your focus.

2. Walk in the Woods

Combining sedentary behavior with lots of screen time is a recipe for depression, anxiety, and poor sleep. It is important to remember that the solution is simpler than we think: go outside! Put your phone in your pocket, resist the urge to document your walk, and just find a bit of nature to walk in.

3. Beware of Compare and Despair

The next time you're scrolling, take time to pause and examine how you're really feeling.

For more information, contact Tara Solomon-Smith, Adult Development and Aging Agent, tsolomon@ksu.edu or 620-724-8233.

#

K - State Research and Extension is an equal opportunity provider and employer